The Problem – Financial Exclusion of Women Entrepreneurs

The Harsh Reality for Women Entrepreneurs

Case Study – Amina's Struggle to Scale Her Business

"Amina, a fashion entrepreneur in Lagos, has a strong customer base but cannot buy materials in bulk. She applied for a loan but was denied because she lacked collateral. Without financial support, she remains in a cycle of limited growth."

Amina represents millions of women in Africa who face systemic financial exclusion.

Limited Access to Credit

- Over 70% of women-led businesses in Africa lack access to affordable financial services.
- Women receive only 15% of total bank loans, despite running 40%+ of SMEs

Financial Constraints

- Traditional banks demand high collateral that many women do not have.
- Interest rates for women entrepreneurs can be as high as 50-100% annually.
- Financial illiteracy prevents women from accessing growth capital.

Business Growth Limitations

- 98% of women entrepreneurs operate in the informal sector, restricting business expansion.
- Lack of credit history makes banks hesitant to lend.
- High loan rejection rates create an unfair system, limiting job creation.
